THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

Wheeling made something of an effort in a quiet way, and without concert of action, to revive the custom of New Year's action, to revive the custom of New Year's calling. Nobody in particular was expecting anybody in particular. Gentlemen dropped in, mostly in the evening, the young gentlemen chiefly in full dress. There was no ceremony. There were a few "spreads," but not many. The informality of the thing gave so much pleasure that callers and hostesses made a New Year resolve that there should be more of the same kind next year. The gentlemen advance the suggestion that open house without a set table shall be the programme.

"Five or six years ago a terrible calamity visited Volcano. Of course, in a place where large stores of the lighter grades of petroleum—whether crude or refined—is kept in bulk, there is a lways great danger of fire, but long immunity from trouble of that kind lulled the people into a feeling of security. An ingenious person, James M. Fry by name, noticed this, and determined to 'rouse the anorting citizens' as it were. So he kindled up a conflagration. This, by active personal efforts, he succeeded in extinguishing, and then posed as a herother first discoverer of the fire and the suiccessful, and, as a reward of his vigilance, Mr. Fry was appointed Fire Watchman, with apparently nothing to do but loaf about, draw a good salary, and accept invitations to drink from his numerous admirers. After a while these attentions began to wane, and Mr. Fry proceeded to tread once more his pleasing but perilous path to popularity. This time his success in kindling the fire was marked, but not so the putting out thereof. It was a calm morning, not a breath of wind stirring, when the flames spread from the incendiary torch. The great tanks, brimming with that inflammable of fluids, crude light petroleum, were attacked and conquered in detail. The burning oil spread, spluttering and hissing in every direction. In one wild hour 'fell mart of the business houses, was in ashes. Quality Row,' as the locality wherein were wont to reside the nobility and the gentry was dubbed, escaped, as did the frame shanties perched like nests upon the hillside, but all semblance of orderly arrangement in streets, etc., was blotted out, and has not since been regained."

He'll be Rish After Walle. The table has been the bete noire of the hostess; yet when she "received" she felt the table to be a necessity. After paying the table to be a necessity. After paying homage to the first table on his rounds the caller rarely has stomach for any more. He is expected to compliment everybody's salad and everybody's turkey and so on to the end of a chapter which wearies more as the day wears on. A cup of coffee or checolate with a toothsome biscuit with a completion. will be enough if there must be something. If the well-to-do will give it to be understood that they intend to go no further, those of us who are not so well-to-do will feel that we can follow suit and still hold up our heads. It is a beautiful thought which lies at the bottom of New Year's calls, and the custom ought to be revived at full length. enough if there must be something. Speaking of New Year's calls reminds me that in these days wine is rarely offered. This reminds me of Mr. Randall's ed. This reminds me of Mr. Randari's revisit to the Southland, and this in turn of it a little story. Scene.—Mr. Randall's home in Washington. Time.—When he was it Speaker of the House. Wine was then much more the custom than now. Several gentlemen met by accident at the Speaker's house to extend the felicitations of the season. There was a charming little luncheon, as I well remember, but nothing to drink stronger than coffee and chocolate. An attache of a foreign legation was so disgusted that he could not help showing it. In spite of his high-breeding—he was a baron or a count, or something of that plinchbeck sort—his face told his seelings. Indeed his sense of the fitness of things was so shocked that he would not taste the comfortable things set before him. At last he ventured to suggest to a gentleman who sat next to him that this was a miserable way to entertain friends. Gentleman No. 2—in fact the only gentleman of the two—replied with great dignity and some fire, "This is Mrs. Randall's way. Her friends and his know it and respect them both for it." This was a proper rebuke, the more cutting the more you turn it over and weigh the words. risit to the Southland, and this in turn of

I remember one of President Hayes'
New Year's receptions. You must remember that on that day all the world calls after the preferred officials have passed out. At the reception in question there was an extraordinary jam. Elegantly attired women struggled with poor women in calico frocks to get a chance to ply the President's hand on the pumphandle style. A splendidly dressed woman who persisted in trying to push other women aside to make way for herself, turned to a man belonging to the President's household and in a tone of great condescension said: "Ol! isn't this horrid! One closen't like to be caught in such a crowd. Won't you take my zardin to the President I know he'll admit me at once." With polite but freezing dignity the man replied, "Madam, this is everybody's time. The President wouldn't admit you out of your turn if you were the Queen of England." I believe the man told the truth. It is doubtful whether there has ever been a President who was more of the people and was less taken by fashion and condition than Rutherford B. Hayes. Perhaps this is why the grandees don't lionize him now, but give him ample time to ruise poultry, enjoy his home and set a good example of a ruler of a great people who quietly resumes his place among the people. I remember one of President Hayes'

The very best remedy that can be compounded from our present knowledge of drugs, for colds, coughs, asthma, bronchitis and other lung diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It has cured many cases of consumption when all other remedies had failed. A single spoonful will cure an ordinary cough or cold and give instant relief to asthma. It is soothing, healing and strengthening to throat and lungs and is very pleasant to take. For a small city, not especially noted for devotion to the fine arts, it strikes me that Wheeling has done her full share toward peopling the theatrical world. Just now events emphasize this fact. The triumphant dubut of Mrs. Rammelsburg at Milan is one of these events. Of minor onesthere are not a few. Mr. Keene, who now occupies a high position in the trapic Milan is one of these events. Of minor onesthere are not a few. Mr. Keene, who now occupies a high position in the tragic world, is a quasi Wheeling man, having spent a portion of the early days of his career as an actor here, as a member of an old time stock company at the Washington Hall of those days. Mr. Hennig, of Mr. Keene's company, is Wheeling's most recent contribution to the dramatic stage, and promises to reflect credit upon the city, Mr. Stephens, the star of the "Saved from the Storm" company, has already been announced as a native of the city, and only two weeks ago Miss Crosman, another native of Wheeling, charmed the city of her birth by her natural acting in "The Private Secretary." Other Wheeling actors have recently visited their old home in "Rice's Surprise Party, the "Lights of London" company, the "Rag Baby" company, and even an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe. Besides, there is a famous colored ministrol, and old Dan Rico—but I think I hear the reader say, "Here, draw the line somewhere!" perhaps I would better draw if just above the ministrel and the clown, though "Honorand Iame from no condition rise;" Act well your part—there all the hone lies." Josiah Davis, Trouble.

Josiah Davis, North Middletown, Ky., writes: "I am now using a box of your Herry Carbonic Salve upon an ulcer, which, for the past ten days has given me great pain. This salve is the only remedy I have found that has given me any ease. My ulcer was caused by various evens, and was pronounced incurable by my medical doctors. I find, herever, that Herry's Carbonic Salve is affecting a cure. Beware of imitations. __THISAW People are beginning to talk about "swearing off again." We make a practice of swearing off a great number of times during the year, so as to form a habit of it.

—Burlington Free Press. Rice—but I think I hear the reader say, "Here, draw the line somewhere!" perhaps I would better draw if just above the minstrel and the clown, though "Honorand fame from no condition rise; Act well your part—there all the honor lies."

cows had been missing for several days and I mounted a pony and went after them. It had been raining and I had an umbrella. After I had gone a short distance I caught a glimpse of the cows. As I started toward them I turned around, and there, not ten feet away, was a big mountain llon, standing on a rock starting at me. I assure you I never felt so bashful in my life. I hadn't a gun, or even a jack-knife, and then there was that beast getting ready for a spring! All at once I thought of my umbrella, and, quick as thought I raised it and spread it right in Mr. Lion's face! He didn't stop to examine; but made one great jump clear across a gorge, and when he alighted gave a yell that shook the hills. I saw no more of him. When I got home the cows were there."
